Main Ideas and Details

We know that guide dogs can help blind people. But did you know that other trained animals can help people, too?

Service dogs are trained to help sick or injured people. If something falls, they can pick it up. They can pull a wheelchair. They can turn lights on and off. They can open and close doors. A service dog can also carry schoolbooks.

Monkeys can help people in wheelchairs. Trainers teach monkeys how to use their hands to do many things, such as get people something to eat or drink, pick up dropped items, help with CDs or videos, and turn lights on and off.

Life is better for many people because of animal helpers.

Read the selection above. Then record supporting details below to tell more about the main idea shown.
